

Precious Swain-Peaks

Speaker/ Author / Host

Despite the fact that the odds seemed to not be in her favor Precious was born a survivor. Author of the "Who Says A Princess Can't Come From the Ghetto?" series, she both writes and speaks with transparency and integrity about domestic violence, childhood molestation, being the child of an addicted parent, overcoming depression and surviving a suicide attempt with the hopes that her story will set someone else free.

Testimonials

"I am so appreciative of the assistance, the prayer, the counseling that Precious has given to myself and my family. She has worked to inspire us to meet our issues head on and work through them together."

– Dorothy Hall , Ocala, FL.

"Participating in Precious's seminar on "Trust Issues" help me to identify the root cause of the mindset that I couldn't trust other women. Once I identified where it originated I was able to work within myself to overcome, forgive and find the healing needed for me to build and maintain healthy friendships with other women."

– Dana Folsom, Ocala, FL Participant at Beauty Behind Bars Ocala - 2018

"Reading Precious's blog and hearing her speak to the women of my congregation on the topic "Men Hurt Too" made me realize that because of the image that society has portrayed women don't really realize the pain men actually carry and the importance of being able to share with your mate so she know how to help you through the healing process."

– Richard Howard-Pastor, Ocala, FL

Precious Swain-Peaks is the founder of New Visions Ministries of Florida, Founder and CEO of Swain Girl Media, and the creator owner of Imprecious Entertainment Services. She's a passionate life-long teacher and the go-to girl when it comes to demonstrating that what you have been through doesn't stop where you're going. Using speaking as a way to share her experience and empower women. With transparency and integrity she share her most painful life experiences in the hopes that someone else will find healing and the strength to overcome. Precious helps to show both women and men that there is greatness inside everyone they just have to dig past the pain and the obstacles, take a hold of it and pull it forth.
