

Sharleen Cainer

Sharleen Cainer expansive career includes co-establishing a corporation aimed at aiding people in the realization of their dreams and aspirations through robust business plans.

Sharleen Cainer

Social Worker

Toronto, Ontario, Canada sharleencainer.com

Sharleen Cainer's personal life reflects her more significant commitment to creativity and sustainability. She is passionate about crafting artwork and designing sustainable homes using shipping containers. Her knack for repurposing discarded items into her creations showcases her unwavering commitment to environmental sustainability.

Her dedication to social justice extends beyond her professional boundaries. She has voluntarily contributed to establishing Anishnawbe Health, a health center for Indigenous people. True to her collaborative spirit, she later resigned from her position at the center to allow an Indigenous community member to take charge.

Cainer embodies the essence of service, innovation, and continuous learning. Her life is a powerful testament to her commitment to elevating society and the individual lives within it. Far from being just a commendable social worker, she represents an unwavering dedication to fostering a more inclusive and sustainable future. She stands as an enduringly inspirational figure in social work and community development.

WORK EXPERIENCE

Post Traumatic Rehabilitation

Associate

January 1999 - | Toronto, Ontario, Canada

Resolutions Unlimited

Social Worker

January 1988 - | Toronto, Ontario, Canada

EDUCATION

Ryerson University

BSW

January 1994 - December 1998 | Toronto, Ontario, Canada

Laurentian University

Aboriginal family therapy

January 1997 - December 1997 | Toronto, Ontario, Canada

